

Overview: This course covers methods for analysis of data from high-throughput DNA sequencing, with or without a reference genome sequence, using free and open-source software tools with an emphasis on the command-line Linux computing environment and some practice with CLC Genomics Workbench.

- methods for analysis of data from high-throughput DNA sequencing, with or without a reference genome sequence
- using free and open-source software tools with an emphasis on the command-line Linux computing environment